

HOW TO DRIVE WELL

Woman May Appear as Well as Men on the Boot.

SHE MUST PURSUE A SYSTEM

It is Necessary to Serve an Apprenticeship to Acquire Both Art & Skill Style in Driving.

Men have always delighted in ridiculing the way a woman drives. It is a long-standing joke and one which at this season he has more opportunity to make use of than at any other, for country roads are alive with phaeton and family equipages, driven by women young and old, some of whom come in fairly for the criticism made by those masculines who behold them.

It does not follow, however, that a woman cannot travel easily with her carriage, or that she will have a good time. Quite the contrary can be easily effected with a drap cloth or brushwood without injury.

Over-the-Cabriolet, Wife.

A woman whose husband was in the cabinet thought that during the four years that they were "in office" she spent nearly her entire time in simply cataloguing and returning her numerous visits. "Four or five days of every week in the season," she said, "I actually took my carriage and visited about at 12 o'clock in my visor to catch up with my visiting book before my next reception day brought a fresh batch of callers to overwhelm me. It was the most dispiriting thing imaginable and was the hardest work I ever did. Something ought to be done to relieve the wives of the cabinet officers from such a burden."

Delightful Idea of Wrinkles.

A young woman disciple of Delaire gives the importance of keeping the face in drawing, by which she means in normal, undistorted, uncontracted, youthful condition, as a preservative of a youthful appearance. Wrinkles are only frequently assumed, lines become dry because it gives the best field for the estimating wisdom of the man and because it shows to the best advantage the beauty of architectural and sculptural ornament with which the buildings have been enriched, but also because it gives better relief than any other could give to the floating qualities on the surfaces, to the turf, to the floral decorations everywhere, to the vegetation in the lagoon and finally to the stream of pedestrians which moves ceaselessly beneath the shadow of the massive buildings.

Just because it does give such strong relief to any darker tint coming into contact with it, it is important for such of the latter as are comprehended in the painted decoration to be manipulated with taste. I think they have been, in the main, in the buildings on the part of the exhibition—the Administration building—the glimpses of color caught between the columns of the loggia in the second stage of the composition are of a character to heighten perceptively the effect of the tonal scheme and yet remain in the subordinate position which belongs to the recessed walls on which the decoration is laid. This wall is painted a dull red.

Seen from the ground, the roof of the loggia throws a deep shadow behind the columns supporting it, but so large in scale is the building that even at a distance the color actually counts and is as distinct a factor in the beauty of the structure as are the white surfaces from the ground to the wall above the loggia or the gilded splendor which thence up to the crown of the dome is the most dazzling mark on the horizon.—Royal Cortones in Century.

Stanford's Bazaar For His Horses.
In employing men to work at Palo Alto the late senator gave them the most strict orders. They were told never to strike, kick or whip a horse, and his instructions to his men were: "Always do a thing a little better than anybody else, and you will succeed. When you handle a horse, treat him a little better than any one else. When you breed a horse, breed him to a little better stock each time."

It was in this way that Stanford revolutionized the horse breeding of the country. He never allowed one of his men to ill use a horse, and they knew it. There is never noise or blows around the Palo Alto stables, and the horses are never frightened. To show his feeling toward his horses the late Henry Vrooman once told of an occurrence when he was dining with Senator Stanford. Just after the dinner one of the drivers insisted that he must see the senator. He was ushered in, with blood over his face, which was badly cut. "John knocked me down," explained the man, referring to one of the trainers.

"What did you do?" asked the senator.

"Nothing," replied the man.

"But you must have done something."

"I kicked a horse, and John knocked me down," said the man.

"Those were John's instructions, and I think he did just right," said the senator.

Family Soup.

One pint of young peas, one onion (if the flavor is liked), two small potatoes.

Cover with water and boil until soft.

Remove and rub through sieve (unless you like the vegetables in the soup, as many do).

Now a pint of fresh milk, in which rubbed smooth a teaspoonful of flour.

Let it boil ten minutes and stir constantly.

In the soup turner have the yolks of two eggs and pour over them the boiling soup, stirring carefully to keep the eggs from growing lumpy.

Season to taste with salt and pepper and a very little grated nutmeg.

Serve with toasted bread or croutons.

The Word "Dress."

If we are told, it is incorrect to speak of a lady's "dress," meaning her skirt and waist only, if her "dress" includes all the garments worn, even shoes and stockings, why of course the same rule must apply to a child's clothing. And yet to speak of a little boy in a "gown" would call to mind a masquerade in episcopal or maternal garments. Perhaps frock is the alternative.

Home Prettiness.

The new tea services are little beauties. The dainty cups, cream, sugar, bowl and tea pot are arranged on a revolving tray of the china. One seen recently was decorated with sprays of forget-me-nots, the deep scalloped edges finished with broken gilt trimmings. As the little cups swing around you could almost detect the odor of the tea, for when served in such dainty service it is natural that this important feature of the evening meal should seem to be endowed with a flavor sweet.

Turkish toweling in pure white is considered the most correct thing for the covering of chairs and couches in the summer sitting-room. The toweling, while apt to show dirt more quickly than other fabric, may yet be sent to the wash-tub, its place in the meantime being taken by a fresh set of the same, whence it emerges as daintily fresh and attractive as ever.

The new patterns in wall paper are designed in very light shades. The figures are small and contrasting colors are easily seen. The borders are deep and the picture mouldings are of oak or walnut. Care should be taken to have the furniture coverings, carpet and paper blind, and the lighter the colors placed of the womb.

That or some other derangement of the organ, causing irregularity and other troubles.

The choice of an "off white" for the basis of the decorative plan of the fair was in the last degree felicitous—trim-ing plaster casts.

The beauty of plaster casts is greatly enhanced by toning down their extreme whiteness. A pale yellow tint that goes well with every effect is given them by the addition of light and evenly with orange, should dilute with alizarin to produce the desired color. A creamy mixture that is given to another way. The surface should first be carefully spackled with a very thin coat of drying linseed oil, then with a thin coat of varnish. This makes the cast smooth. When dry spread over this coating a coat of white paint diminished a little by burntumber. Use only a thin topcoating to the paint and put on two thin coats. When dry add a third coat of white.
